Address Retrieval API

Problem:
Address books aren't what they used to be. Sure, today's mobile contact lists are great for quick phone calls or text messages- but when is the last time you used your address book to mail a holiday card or send a gift? Modern technology has left behind the art of written communication, and it's a shame.

BUT we have a solution...

Solution:
Postal Gopher. This address pending retrieval service acts as your own personal "gopher" to seek and retrieve out postal addresses of your mobile contacts. It is safe, secure and fully automated. No need to send tedious emails to friends asking for their apartment number or zip code. No need to hire a graphologist to decipher Great Uncle Louie's return address on an ancient envelope. Higher Octave Music: Creation and Evolution in Harmony

The need for cultural expression has inspired countless musical genres, which in turn shape the very lifestyles that spawned them. In the same way that rock & roll matured with the rebellious movement of the '60s, the "new age" genre of music has evolved with the global and metaphysical awareness of the '90s.

"Our music has been embraced as a lifestyle element. Like the clothes we wear and the food we eat, our music plays an integral part in our lives," reflects Matt Marshall, President of Higher Octave Music.

Higher Octave Music, a catalyst in this evolution of "new age" music, has elevated and integrated the genre into the lifestyle of mind, body and spiritual consciousness. Now, with an impressive array of recordings that incorporates a global perspective and a wider breadth of styles, Higher Octave Music has helped to re-invent "new age" music to more accurately offer Contemporary Instrumental, Smooth Jazz, World Music, Flamenco/Latin and Relaxation Music.

"As in music, so in life."

Rarely does a company credo more accurately reflect the hearts and minds of its creators than does the Higher Octave Music philosophy, "As in music, so in life." Founders Matt Marshall and Dan Selene forged that theme when they met at an Alexander Body Work seminar in 1986. Dan had been a teacher and a businessman, while Matt was

Rix: Where Dining Out is a Main Event

SANTA MONICA -- You don't just "go" to Rix Restaurant -- you "step out"...and you step into a modern-retro supper club that is a crossroads of time-travel, where the seminal "cool" of Bogey has been revived and melded with the stylish elegance of affluent Santa Monica, or "Hollywood By The Sea."

The Vision

Rix pays homage to the days when "dining out" meant donning a dinner jacket or slipping into a cocktail dress, jumping into a long tail-finned car and bringing enough red paint to cover the whole town. The drinks poured strong, the booths sat big, the steaks cooked rare and the bodies were warm. Frank at the door always remembered your name. The hand-shaking, back-slapping and genuine camaraderie made you feel like you were part of something great.

In conceiving Rix, Managing Partners Neal Morse and Will Karges have achieved that rare harmony of nostalgia and foresight that yields a hip glamour greater than its parts. Their restaurant-lounge-patio, which sports a "members-only" feel without the pretense, maintains a consistent sense of class throughout its assorted rooms.

The Venue

Upon entering, visitors pass the enclosed water sculpture to the elegant main dining room, memorably designed with a bi-level grandeur bridged by a majestic terrazzo staircase (great for making an entrance). Classic black and white photos of Bogey, Bacall, Sinatra and other inspiring personalities grace the mahogany-paneled walls, bestowing their approval on the plush booths, crisp white linen and other modern embodiments of the long-lost archetype of verve.

Life in the Passing Lane: The Story of Soichiro Honda

If a company's product reflects the spirit of its founder, then Honda vehicles are a fitting tribute to the daring passion and spirit of Soichiro Honda. His appetite for innovation, attention to detail, and penchant for thinking "outside the box" enabled Soichiro to grow the Honda Corporation into one of the top engineering, manufacturing and marketing entities the world has ever seen.

Born in 1906 in Komyo, a small village outside of Tokyo, Soichiro's love for machinery first showed at an early age when he repaired bicycles in his father's blacksmith shop. Eventually, Soichiro took an apprenticeship at an automotive repair shop in Tokyo, and a few years later returned to Komyo to open his own store. There, his wild spirit flourished, leading him to his first major technological breakthrough: he fit a Curtiss-Wright V-8 aircraft engine to a Ford car chassis, got behind the wheel, and set a Japanese racing average speed record of 75 mph. After a wreck in 1936 left him incapacitated for 18 months, Soichiro decided to focus on his business.

The following year, with financing from friends and family, Soichiro opened a piston ring factory. Despite a rocky start, Soichiro eventually pioneered a technique for making piston rings - one of his more than 100 patents. In 1945, after his factory was destroyed by war and an earthquake, the 40-year-old Soichiro paid $3,200 for 500 surplus two-stroke, single-cylinder, 50cc engines that were originally built for portable communications

Farewell to the Sands: A Place in the Sun 1952-1996

by Matthew Sjoquist

"Get that man a drink." - Frank Sinatra to Dean Martin, 1960 on the Copa Stage.

Libations shall flow no more at the Sands Hotel Casino. On June 30, 1996 the world will bid a sentimental farewell to the quintessential party palace of the "Old Vegas."

But the closure of the Sands is not merely the end of one property's existence. Rather, it is the end of an era; an era that may have faded long ago, but stubbornly survived in the bastion of living history that is the Sands.

Built by Texas gaming entrepreneur and horse breeder Jackie Friedman for $5.5 million, the Sands opened on December 15, 1952 with 200 rooms and a marquee declaring it as "A Place in the Sun." The Sands was the seventh resort to open on the "L.A. Highway" (soon after to be known as the "Strip") and helped define the essence of luxury and glamour for which Las Vegas is still known today.

New York show producer and Copacabana Night Club owner Jack Entratter and businessman Carl Cohen joined with Friedman to help make the Sands a world-renowned resort destination. Many even credit Entratter with putting Las Vegas on the map. His extensive contacts with celebrities and members of the national press kept the Sands and the city in the news.

On the stage of the famed Copa Room, home of "The Most Beautiful Girls in the World," superstars such as Danny Thomas, Terry Lewis, Debbie Reynolds, Jimmy Durante, Red Skelton, Wayne Newton, Jack Benny, and Frank Sinatra and his "Rat Pack" (including Dean Martin, Sammy Davis, Jr., Peter Lawford and Joey Bishop) made regular appearances.

Current owner, Sheldon G. Adelson, acquired the famed property from Kirk Kerkorian's MGM Grand, Inc. in 1988.

Adelson, Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer of Las Vegas Sands, Inc. and The Interface Group, immediately built the Sands Expo & Convention Center after assuming control of the property in 1989. Since then, SECC has been expanded to more than 1,000,000 square feet.

On May 16 it was announced that the Sands would close on June 30, 1996 in preparation for the demolition of the existing facility and the construction of a new $1.5 billion dual hotel/casino resort complex. While final plans for the new facilities have yet to be announced, a few details have been released: the new resorts will include 6,000 suites, 200,000 square-feet of casino space and a 750,000 square-foot consumer shopping experience with more than 150 shops. The new properties will also have more than 30 restaurants, spas, and a 400,000 square-foot convention meeting and exhibition complex, which in addition to the existing SECC totals 1.6 million square-feet - the second largest such facility in the country.

To Adelson's credit, he has enlisted the support of Right Associates, an international career transition firm, to install an on-site Career Transition Center for the 1200 employees affected by the closing. The center will help identify job opportunities, provide employment workshops and prepare employees for job interviews.

Hunter S. Thompson once wrote, "When the going gets weird, the weird turn pro."... those working the weird final days of the Sands Hotel Casino have had to turn pro - or at least stay pro - in the face of epic change.

But while the buildings may fall, the memories will not.
